FIND YOUR TRUE POTENTIAL

During the first 5 days of the expedition you will still be castaway on a remote desert island but with expedition instructors. This is the education phase when you learn your new bush-craft skills and have plenty of fun along the way. Once you have received your training you are on your own, marooned for 3 days with only a machete, knife, basic fishing equipment, medikit and satellite phone. This is it, it's time to put into practice the skills you've learnt and survive. . Below is an example of a typical 10 day expedition in Panama. However trust us when we say that we have left a lot out, we don't want to ruin all of the surprises.

An overview

Palawan continues to top the lists of “best place to see now” and it is no wonder. Boasting the same dramatic limestone geography of the Phuket and Krabi, but with the level of development found there 30 years ago, this paradise still remains largely unspoilt. Highlights include unrivalled WWII wreck dives and the longest navigable underground river systems in the world. All set to the backdrop of arguably the most dramatic coastal scenery on the planet. If you can spare two or three more days after your trip, do. Local guides will be with you and teaching you throughout the trip, they know the island and how to survive on it better than anyone else, so you can assure that you are in good hands! They will teach you everything you need to know including building shelter, making fires, catching fish and finding the food you need.

DAY 2-6: 5-DAY TRAINING PHASE: OUR WORLD-CLASS BUCHCRAFT INSTRUCTORS ARE HERE FOR YOU!

- After breakfast, we head to the marina and take a 90-minute speedboat to your new island home, explore the expansive beach, choose the location for the camp, and string the expedition hammocks.
- Typically after a couple of days, everyone on the island reconnects with their circadian rhythm and rises a little after sunrise. So we use the mornings to learn the 4 key elements of survival: Shelter, Fire, Water, and Food. We explore different methods for each element.
- Afternoons are for exploration, trekking through the jungle and rocky headlands, mastering fishing skills, or simply enjoying paradise.
- Evenings are for gathering and connecting with your new tribe around the campfire, eating a communal meal we all helped catch and cook, telling stories, or marveling at the open sky.

DAY 7 - 9: 3-DAY SURVIVAL PHASE: YOUR INSTRUCTORS ARE GONE! – 72 HOURS

- After completing your training phase, you and your new tribe will move to a different spot on the island to put into practice the skills learned.
- You will experience the wilderness with little more than a machete, knife, essential fishing equipment, medikit, and satellite phone. But don't worry; we have an invisible safety net in place!
- For many, this is one of the toughest psychological and physical challenges they have ever endured: the reality of survival sinks in, and new highs and lows are encountered as hunger, thirst, and discomfort are offset by the euphoria of success starting a fire or finding food. And simultaneously, this is an experience that leaves the most incredible sense of achievement and deep gratitude.
- If you would like this phase in complete solitude, please request this on your booking form. We will reach out to you after checking availability.
